

Abstract

A method and system of transferring boot files from a server to a client having a pre-installation environment. The server authenticates the client. The client authenticates the server. The boot files are transferred from the authenticated server to the authenticated client.

The boot files may be authenticated by the client before execution to create an operating system.